That Rejected Claim.

In the published report of the proceedings of the board of supervisors this month, it was stated that a claim of $11 presented by the Amador Ledger, was cut down to $3. The rejection of $8 of the bill calls for some explanation on our part, especially in face of the statement in one of our local contemporaries to the effect that the $8 reduction was for an advertisement that was never ordered. And the supervisors are patted on the back for thus carefully guarding the interests of the county.

We have no hesitation in declaring that the rejection of the $8 claim for advertising was the smallest business the supervisors have indulged in for a long time. Not only was it small, but it was unjust. The claim was a legitimate one, the service had been performed, in accordance with a legal contract with a county official to that end. The facts are as follows: In October last we were instructed by the then tax-collector, T. K. Norman, to insert a notice to taxpayers, setting forth that state and county taxes were then due and payable, and the same would become delinquent, and the penalty for delinquency. A similar notice is published in every county, and the notice is usually published up to the date of the delinquency of the last instalment in April. The law requires the tax collector to publish such a notice for at least two weeks. That was under the old law when taxes were payable in full before the last Monday in November, and it is not presumed that the tax collector is deprived of discretionary power to publish longer if he deems it to be necessary. We were told to publish right along. We did so, as has been done in other counties. T. K. Norman went out of office in January, while the notice was still running, and his authority was sufficient for us to continue publication. If his successor did not want it so published, or wished the notice to be changed to another paper, it was his business to so inform us, and order its discontinuance in the Ledger. He did not do so. We had no authority to take that notice out without such instruction, any more so than any other legal notice. We would have rendered ourselves liable for damages had we assumed that authority. Imagine a sheriff's sale or a summons being dropped from the columns of a newspaper for no other reason than that another individual than the one ordering the same had stepped into office. As a matter of fact, we were publishing a sheriff's sale notice when the change of county officers took place, which involved thousands of dollars. We had just as much right to drop that notice on the ground of a change of personality in the sheriff's office as we had the notice to taxpayers referred to. Of course we did not do so. The notice to taxpayers was published during January and February, and the bill therefor was presented to the supervisors at each monthly meeting thereafter, and paid, as they had been previously. The supervisors and all others concerned had the opportunity of examining the claim at every meeting, but not a word of protest from them or anyone else, so far as we know, was heard. But at the April meeting, the board, at whose instance it is not for us to say, for we have no definite knowledge on that point, concluded that the bill for eight dollars should be rejected. It gave no reason for such action. It was not said that the work had not been ordered. It was not denied that the publishing had been done. The only reason that we can give for such action, is that a reputation had been succeeded by a democrat in the sheriff's office, and hence the Ledger's bill should be rejected on general principles. That is the history of this peculiar transaction. The editor stated to the board that he was not particular, if they thought it right to reject the claim, he would be satisfied. He wanted to see to what length they would go in this matter, and did not think they would go to the extreme of repudiating a just and legal claim solely on the ground of the incoming of a democratic sheriff. Such is democratic ways in the far west. It is a delectable sample of business methods. The Ledger could collect the bill by legal process, if necessary. The amount involved is not sufficient to warrant a law suit. We should lose tenfold more than the amount involved in such a process. But we do not propose to be maligned, and misrepresented, as well as refused the payment of a just bill against the county, and hence this explanation.

Frown Down the Red Flag Business.

A significant move was made the past week, ostensibly by the supporters of the socialist movement, which typifies opposition to organized government. Some doggers printed on red paper with black ink were distributed over the city. The posters bore no imprint; evidently the print shop which turned them out was ashamed to own its work by affixing

For Thin, Poor Blood

You can trust a medicine tested 60 years! Sixty years of experience, think of that! Experience with Ayer's Sarsaparilla; the original Sarsaparilla; the Sarsaparilla the doctors endorse for thin blood, weak nerves, general debility.

But even this grand old medicine cannot do the best work if the liver is inactive and the bowels constipated. For the best possible result, you should take the laxative of Ayer's Pills while taking the Sarsaparilla.

The usual imprint. The wording was brief, consisting of the following in three languages, English, Italian and Austrian:

"Miners, get ready for the solemnity of May 1st." We are told that early in the week these crimson emblems of a discredited political creed were scattered liberally over the city, posted on bulletin boards and on telephone poles, and other conspicuous places. To the credit of the citizens of Jackson, he it said, they did not long remain on display. Early Wednesday morning a trip through Main street revealed only one solitary placard in sight; displayed in a show window of a business house.

The reader is left to infer what is meant by the "solemnity of May 1st." It is very ambiguous and probably intentionally obscure. But the proclamation, and its sanguinary ground work is not to be mistaken. It emanates from the band of anarchists, masquerading under the name of socialists. The prevailing interpretation of this movement taken in connection with expressed intentions to parade on the 1st of May, is that it is a call addressed to miners to participate in a street procession under the red flag on May day.

Kumors have been afloat that the record of last year is to be repeated this year, with greater numbers. To the red banner was flaunted in the face of American citizenship on that occasion without hindrance, much to the disgust and humiliation of those who appreciate and respect the principles of this government. If this be the program, let us hope in the interest of decency, that the voice of protest on the part of all good citizens will find expression in such emphatic manner, coupled with the efforts of peace officers to prevent such a disgraceful display, that the leaders will be led to forgo the anarchistic part at least of their parade. If they want to show their strength of numbers in a public parade, that is their privilege. This is a free country; but liberty must not degenerate into license, and a defiance of our principles of government. Any body of men can hold to their opinions no matter how erroneous or revolutionary those opinions may be, but they must not publicly insult native-born and naturalized citizens alike, by acts which not only tend to but actually invite a disturbance of the peace.

The local miners union repudiates all connection with these doggers or the movement which they are designed to aid. Although the appeal is made direct to miners, the intimation thereby conveyed that the miners as a body are in sympathy with these tactics is entirely erroneous. On the contrary, miners are as pronounced in their opposition to such inflammatory appeals as any other class of citizens.

The Law Governing Deposit of County Funds.

According to the last count of money in the county treasury, the amount on special deposit in the Amador County Bank was $33,000. This draws interest at the rate of two per cent per annum. The law on this subject reads as follows:

"The total amount of public moneys on deposit in any bank, shall not at any one time exceed fifty per cent of the paid-up capital stock of such depository bank or banks. No officer shall have on deposit at any one time more than ten per cent of the public moneys in any bank while there are other qualified banks requesting such deposits, provided, that no treasurer of a county or municipality, shall be required to deposit public moneys in any bank outside of the county owning the money or in which the municipality is situated."

The capital stock of the Amador Bank is $30,000. It is the intention of the directors to increase this capitalization, but as it stands at present the treasurer is limited under the law to $15,000 as the maximum amount of county money that can be placed therein on deposit; when, as a matter of fact, there is over double that amount. Treasurer Gritton stated that he was not aware of this provision of the law until it was recently called to his attention. While he feels perfectly safe as regards the amount of security held by him to protect this large deposit, nevertheless he will obey the mandate of the law, and see that not to exceed 50 per cent of the amount of paid up capital stock is hereafter on deposit. It is only right to state, however, that while the capital stock of the Amador Bank is $30,000, with the surplus that has been accumulated by the policy so far followed by the bank in not declaring dividends, the amount of capital invested in the local bank is in excess of $60,000. Whether this surplus would out any figure in authorizing the enlargement of the limit of 50 per cent we are not prepared to say. The fact is that the amount of county funds in the Amador Bank is little if any in excess of 50 per cent of the amount of capital invested by the stockholders in that institution.

Frown Down the Red Flag Business.

A significant move was made the past week, ostensibly by the supporters of the socialist movement, which typifies opposition to organized government. Some doggers printed on red paper with black ink were distributed over the city. The posters bore no imprint; evidently the print shop which turned them out was ashamed to own its work by affixing

The Appeal to Reason, the socialist and anarchistic propaganda organ published at Girard, Kansas, comes to us this week printed on red paper, the color indicative of its doctrines. This is significant taken in connection with the distribution of red doggers around Jackson by the local adherents of the same cause, urging the miners to "get ready for the solemnity of May 1st." May first is the original labor day—a day selected in honor of labor. Perhaps the mention of May 1st has no other significance than this. The miners are not informed as to how they should "get ready." That is left for the imagination to fill in. And in fact the gap is being filled by all kinds of theories, some of them of the wildest and most startling character. People don't know where they are at when such blind documents are thrown in their face. Attempts to inflame the public mind in this way should be suppressed by the strong arm of the law as soon as possible.

AUKUM.

Ankum, April 14.—This community was shocked at the announcement that Wm. Hynds, an old and respected citizen, was found dead in his cabin on Friday last about noon. Coroner Potter held the inquest, although Mr. Hynds died on the Ankum side of the river, the division line that divides Amador and El Dorado counties. It appears that coroner Winchell of El Dorado county had an inquest to hold in his county, and as Mr. Hynds died only just barely across the river an arrangement between the two coroners was made that Mr. Potter might cross the line and hold the inquest. I understand that heart failure was the cause of Mr. Hynds' death. No one about this vicinity was better known than Mr. Hynds. He was a man of considerable means—having considerable money on hand to loan upon realty. In a sense he was the banker of his surroundings for several miles in extent. He was a brainy man, far above mediocre. He possessed a good education, which coupled with adroitness and integrity of purpose made him a marked man, who invariably met respect wherever he was known. In the little cabin where he died he lived for 30 years, as a ditch tender for Hayward and Hobart, where he amassed his money by tending ditches for a good salary, and by loaning and speculating with the funds he held at his command. To his friends he was always staunch and faithful, and unlike most of money lenders he was charitable in all his actions. The community has met a loss that they cannot well afford to lose. He was buried at Plymouth on Sunday. Request in pace.

An old resident, Mr. Lions, who till recently was farming in this vicinity, met death at Oakland two or three weeks ago, probably foully. He was missing for several days and his son instituted a search for him. According to reports his watch and some more of his belongings were found at the city's morgue.

James H. Sharp, formerly of Sacramento county, bought the Frank Uhlinger place near here, and is to take possession the first of the coming week. He sold his ranch in Sacramento county, and has turned beneficiary, and I suppose he intends to enjoy the balmy breeze of the foothills and under the sunlight of the God of hymen slip the bliss from the hymenial altar at the same time. Good luck to him.

The Dillons' have rented the Mills' place, and will move there this week. The whistle on the new mine on the Nickley homestead will soon be sounding, dismissing and calling the employees to work.

An old patient in the county hospital named Louis Bomanoff, strayed away from the hospital grounds Tuesday morning. He is 83 years of age, and feeble minded. He is able to travel well considering his age, but easily loses himself, having little knowledge of location. He was seen going by the Zeila mine at a 2.40 gait for him. Superintendent LeMoine was out hunting him for several hours before hearing of his whereabouts. It seems he got as far as the south fork of Jackson creek, and there being no way of crossing he was halted, and turned his steps backward toward town, where he was quickly taken in tow and conveyed to his home.

Tobia Ferraschi, who lost his wife and two children by ptomaine poisoning at his home near Clinton, has resigned his place as ditch tender for the Standard Electric Company, and left for Reno, Nevada, yesterday morning, with his three surviving children. The strain upon him to live in the neighborhood, where the terrible calamity occurred, was too great. Tue company held out inducements for him to remain in their employ, but he decided that it would be better to remove to other scenes.

His place has been taken by a son of F. C. McKenzie, the constable of Volcano.

The Novelty Show Company, the main attraction of which is Llusday B. Hicks, the miner who was entombed for 14 days in a tunnel in Kern county, announced another performance for Friday night of last week.

The preceding evening there was a fair house, but the show was very much of a disappointment. Not only was it unattractive from a show point, but the arrangements were very crude. Reserved seat tickets were handed out, but no reserved seats were secured; no usher to show the patrons to seats. In fact, they were told to take any seat they pleased.

Hicks is a sorry failure from a show view point. He does nothing except show himself, and another member does all the talking. The whole affair was one of the tamest that has visited this town for a long time. On Friday the audience failed to materialize. About half a dozen paid the price, and after waiting an hour, the ticket money was returned, there not being enough to justify the troupe in opening up. Some doubt was expressed about the genuineness of Hicks, as the entombed miner. If he is the man, he has certainly fallen into the hands of a poor crowd. They don't know the first principles of the show business.

One year ago to-day San Francisco was in flames—the result of the awful earthquake. Now the earth is again trembling, and many Mexican cities are in ruins, while the Kingston horrors are still fresh in our minds. In common with 10,000 other pastors, Rev. C. E. Winning, of our local church, will on next Sunday evening speak on "the earthquake and its influence on California." All are welcome. Services as usual at 11 a. m. Sunday school at 2 p. m.

The meeting of Jackson Miners' Union held last Wednesday, was the time for the election of a delegate to attend the general convention of the Western Federation to be held in Denver, Colorado, in June. It was decided to send no representative from the Jackson union. This policy was pursued last year. It was thought that the expense was too heavy to justify sending a regular delegate.

Sutter and Amador Unions sent delegates last season. Whether or not they have done so this year, we have not heard.

The Candlestick Stabbing Case.

The trial of Raffaele Fannuchi for assault with a deadly weapon upon one Chorovich at the Kennedy mine was commenced in the superior court on Wednesday morning. The case was prosecuted by the district attorney, and the defendant was represented by Chas. H. Crocker. A jury was quickly secured during the morning session as follows:

L. N. Chitwood, N. P. Williams, Wm. Doyle, D. Gilchrist, G. W. Vandament, W. B. McFarland, R. O. McKean, Jacob Kiles, John Kinger, G. W. Haney, N. Hornberger and S. J. Avice.

The testimony given by the witnesses went to show that the dispute arose in the washroom connected with the changing room of the Kennedy mine. M. Chorovich, the complaining witness, went into the washroom and seized the basin that was being or was about to be used by Fannuchi, whether by mistake or intentional was not clear. This led to some feeling. Both went into the changing room to change clothes, Fannuchi on one side, and Chorovich on the other. Words occurred there, and a challenge to fight on the outside was the outcome. Chorovich left the changing room to go home, and under the dump pile waited for Fannuchi, who at length appeared on the dump above. Chorovich went toward him, and asked him if he wanted to fight, and he answered no. Fannuchi had a miner's candlestick with him. It is not unusual for miners to pack their candlesticks and to from work. The candlesticks are the property of the workers as a rule. Blows were struck and a scuffle occurred. Both men fell to the ground and a tussle ensued on the ground, at one time one getting the upper place, and again the other. In the melee Fannuchi jabbed the point of his candlestick into his adversary. It was not a dangerous wound, and the injured party speedily recovered. Fannuchi was arrested on a felony charged for assault with a deadly weapon.

The jury retired to deliberate upon their verdict half an hour before noon. At 12 o'clock they were taken to dinner, and upon returning to the jury room, they soon announced that they were ready to report to the court. Upon returning to the court, they handed in a verdict finding the defendant guilty of simple assault.

This result is looked upon as the most sensible outcome of the trial, and is commended generally. The punishment for this offense is limited to a fine of $500, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding three months. The offense as fixed by the jury came within the jurisdiction of the justice's court.

Father Horgan in Runaway Accident.

A press dispatch gives the following account of an accident that befell Father Horgan, who recently left Jackson to take charge of the Catholic church at Truckee. The accident happened at Sparks, Nev.

Rev. Father Horgan of Truckee had a narrow escape from death in a runaway accident here Saturday afternoon by being thrown from a cart, the wheels passing over his body, injuring him internally and inflicting lacerations and contusions that may keep him in bed indefinitely.

The accident occurred when the priest drove to the Southern Pacific railroad station to purchase a ticket to Fallon. The horse ran for half a mile, demolishing the vehicle. Father Horgan was carried to his cousin's home, Father Horgan of Sparks, by pedestrians.

Father Thomas Horgan intended to hold Catholic services at Fallon yesterday and for that purpose he drove to the depot. When he had bought the ticket he took his seat again in the cart. The horse, that was broken originally for the saddle, became frightened, and started to run. The priest was pitched forward under the wheels. His clothing was torn to shreds in the accident.

The hearing in the superior court on the application for naturalization, has been postponed until the 18th of May, at the request of the U. S. district attorney. It is required that the district attorney of the federal court, or his deputy, be present at all hearings for admission to citizenship. There is so much business of this nature that the force in the district attorney's office is insufficient to attend all hearings separately. So the cases set for this week has been postponed until the 18th of next month, the date set for the hearing of other applications.

TRIAL OF JOHN MCGREGOR.

On Grand Larceny Charge.

The case of John McGregor, charged with grand larceny, in relieving J. D. Huot of $310 in gold coin in the vicinity of Plymouth on the night of January 24, 1907, was commenced in the superior court Monday morning. The jury was selected during the morning session. District attorney Vicini conducted the prosecution, and W. G. Snyder attended to the defendant's side of the case. The evidence was purely circumstantial.

The following named persons were sworn as jurors to try the issue: Jos. H. Dover, D. Gilchrist, R. O. McKean, Wm. Mattley, A. S. Hartwick, Thos. A. Maher, J. D. Nichols, Chas. Childs, W. S. Weymouth, Jas. K. Allen, Joseph Ellis, John A. Stewart.

Jos. D. Huot, the complaining witness related the disappearance of the coin substantially as follows:

He was sent by his father, Felix Huot on a mission to buy mules across the border of El Dorado county. He reached Plymouth on the night of January 24th, with a sack of money containing $315, all in gold coin. He changed a $5 gold piece to pay for his supper at the hotel, and put the change in silver in the buck-skin sack along with the other coin. He visited two or three saloons and partook of several drinks, and met McGregor. He tied his horse in the street, and between 8 and 9 o'clock McGregor of his own accord put the horse in the stable. While in a saloon drinking, he took out the bag of money in the presence of McGregor and others and dumped it out on the counter to get the silver to pay for the drinks. On finding that his horse was in the stable, he told McGregor to get it. The latter said he would if he would go home, which he promised to do. It was between 10 and 11 o'clock when the horse was got, and he mounted it. He was sure he had the money on him when he got on his horse. This was corroborated by another witness, who said he heard the clink of the coin when he mounted. He invited McGregor to ride, and the latter said he would as far as his own house. The two started off. A portion of the way McGregor rode with his arms around Huot's waist, as if to hold himself on. Passing McGregor's home, some 50 yards, McGregor fell off, and went no further, but walked homeward. Huot continued his journey homeward, and after going 300 or 400 yards further, his horse shied near the Woolford place, and he fell off. When he picked himself up, he noticed that his money was gone. He lit matches and searched in the roadway where he fell off, but found no trace of the money, or the money sack. He then went back to Plymouth, and tried to get a bed for the night, but found the hotels closed, and so he passed the hours until daylight walking around, and trying to rest on a pile of sacks in front of Rosenwald & Kahn's store. Did not go to McGregor that night to inquire about the money, as he thought he would be in bed. Saw McGregor next morning, and told him he had lost his money. Inquired of others if they knew who he had left his money with the night before. There was $310 in the sack. Did not charge McGregor with taking it next morning, but told him of its loss. Took breakfast at McGregor's home on the morning of the 25th, with his family. McGregor said he would go with him to look for the coin. McGregor also asked him not to mention that he had been with him the night before, as he McGregor had a bad name. Told constable Wheeler and also telephoned the affair to sheriff Gregory. The money was in his left pocket. It was his father's money, although he had told parties it was his, as it was in his possession. He was satisfied McGregor took it. Did not know where the money was now.

The defense put in very little testimony. Indeed, from the nature of the case, little could be done beyond the denial of guilt which was included in the plea of "not guilty."

The testimony was all finished Tuesday morning. And the arguments pro and con were concluded about 3 o'clock. The jury retired shortly thereafter to deliberate. Six o'clock came and the jurors called for supper. It began to look that a mistrial would be the outcome. After supper, however, the jurors were not long in reaching a verdict. About 8 o'clock they filed into court, and returned a verdict of "Not guilty" and the defendant was discharged.

The verdict was approved by nine-tenths of the people who heard the case. On the first ballot the jurors stood eight to four in favor of acquittal. The last ballot taken before supper was ten to two.

Wm. G. Snyder, the defendant's counsel, was congratulated upon the outcome. It was his first case of a criminal character that he undertook entirely alone. And he handled it well. He showed himself to much advantage in the direct and cross-examination of witnesses. He has the knack of drawing out the facts in a pleasing way without ruffling the temper of the witness. And his address to the jury was a neat and telling effort. For a maiden effort it was voted the best in Amador for many years. He had a good case to start with, and made the best of it, and won easily.

The Grand Larceny Case.

The trial of John Capor, charged with grand larceny in taking from the drawer $120 in gold coin, the separate property of his wife, was commenced yesterday afternoon. As soon as the jury was impaneled, and the complaining witness Mrs. Capor, wife of the defendant, was placed upon the stand, W. J. McGee, attorney for defendant, objected to the witness testifying, contending that it came within the statutory prohibition, that a wife cannot testify against her husband without his consent, and the case was thereupon adjourned until this morning, when the court will rule upon the point.

Upon the assembling of the court this morning the trial was brought to an abrupt and unlooked-for termination. The court held that objection of defendant's counsel against the introduction of testimony on the part of the wife must be sustained. It was held that the relation of husband and wife was of such a sacred character in the eye of the law, that the statute forbidding either spouse testifying against the other without the consent of the other applied to all cases, except such as involved criminal or personal violence. Under this ruling the district attorney stated that the wife in this case was the only witness by which he expected to prove the material facts alleged in the complaint, and that evidence being excluded, he asked the court to instruct the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty. The court stated that the jury could do this without retiring, or could retire for deliberation, that they were not compelled to bring in a verdict as advised by the court, but in the absence of any evidence, in the event of their bringing in any other verdict than acquittal the court would have to set it aside.

The jury preferred to retire, and in a short time returned into court with a verdict of not guilty.

Bad Stomach Makes

Bad Blood. You can not make sweet butter in a foul, unclean churn. The stomach serves as a churn in which to agitate, work up and disintegrate our food as it is being digested. If it be weak, sluggish and foul the result will be torpid, sluggish liver and bad, impure blood.

The ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are just such as best serve to correct and cure all such derangements. It is made up without a drop of alcohol in its composition; chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead of the commonly employed alcohol. Now this glycerine is of itself a valuable medicine, instead of a deleterious agent like alcohol, especially in the cure of weak stomach, dyspepsia and the various forms of indigestion. Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of it:

"In dyspepsia it is an excellent purgative. It is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, disordered stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of the stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and excessive gastric acidity. It is useful in chronic intestinal dyspepsia, especially the flatulent variety, and in catarrh of the stomach, chronic constipation, stimulating the secretory and excretory functions of the intestinal glands."

When combined, in just the right proportions, with Golden Seal root, Stone root, Blackberry bark, Queen's root, Blood root and Mandrake root, or the extracts of these, as in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, there can be no doubt of its great efficacy in the cure of all stomach, liver and intestinal disorders and derangements. These several ingredients have the strongest endorsement in all such cases of such eminent medical leaders as Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, Chicago; Prof. Robert A. Hare, M. D., of Medical Department, University of Chicago; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., of Department, University of New York; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia; Prof. J. M. Scudder, M. D., and Prof. John King, M. D., authors of the American Dispensary, and scores of others, among the leading medical men of our land, who can doubt the curative virtues of a medicine the ingredients of which have such a professional endorsement?

Curiosities of Coffee. Coffee, as experts are aware, has a very extraordinary property. It is one of the most absorbent matters in existence. Coffee beans placed in a damp room will absorb all the moisture till they nearly double their weight. Here is the chance of the dishonest grocer. Not content with the amount of profit made upon coffee, he places palls of water in a room with piles of uncovered coffee beans, and by swelling the coffee adds something like 50 per cent to his profits. The flavor is ruined, but that does not matter to him. So absorbent is coffee, not only of moisture, but of gases and flavors, that shippers of Brazilian coffee always stipulate that the sacks of fresh Rio beans shall never be carried on a steamer, which has raw hides as any part of her cargo. These will taint the coffee more surely than anything else and render it unfit for use. The useful side of this quality of coffee is that in a sickroom a handful or two of fresh roasted and ground beans act as an excellent purifier and deodorizer.—Washington Post.

Trade Signs. On nearly all street corners even in the largest metropolises of Europe may be found relics of the middle ages and of the earliest times. Take, for instance, the wooden image of a shoe, which every cobbler hangs out above his door. It goes back for its origin to the Rome of the pre-Christian era. In the ruins of the lava buried cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii many shop signs of stone and terra cotta have been discovered, the forerunners of those that for centuries adorned the highways not only of Europe, but of the new world. Among them was the emblem of the shoemaker's trade, a Cupid carrying a dainty pair of women's shoes. But the Romans did not stop there. They used the image of a mule driving a mill to point out the bakers' shops and a bush of evergreen to direct the thirsty traveler to a tavern. This particular sign gave rise to the English proverb, "Good wine needs no bush."

How He Learned English. Carl Schurz once told a friend something of his early struggles with the English language. He knew it about as American college boys know their German—that is to say, barely at all. One day, "deciding such nonsense must end," he entered a bookstore and asked for the classic of the English language. A wise clerk gave him "The Vicar of Wakefield." He carefully translated it into German and put his work away for six weeks. At the end of that time he translated his translation back into English and then made a searching comparison between his version and that of Goldsmith's original. "After that," he said, "I knew English."

Absentminded Miss Amy

By Louise J. Strong
Copyright, 1903, by C. H. Sutcliffe

"There are worse things than being an old maid," Miss Amy Colver said serenely.

"Oh, Miss Amy—I didn't mean—I never think of you as being that!" the girl stammered.

"She isn't such a very old maid," Mrs. Wridgely smiled. "And she says truly there are worse things—such as having a blind husband on your hands, which would have been her fate if she'd married Henry Scott, as she came near doing once."

"She wouldn't think so if she were his wife! She'd love him all the more for the affliction. I know I should. If Willie—"

Blushing hotly, Elsie ran from the room.

Mrs. Wridgely laughed, but with a keen glance at her sister, who murmured something about the heat, fanning vigorously. Then presently she asked, "Did you say that Henry Scott was blind?"

"That's what Kate wrote. The doctors think his eyes were ruined, and no wonder, running into that fire so. Inflammation set in. He may never see again. It's a good thing he has no family. He's pretty well off, but he'll need all he's got. He'll never work again, and his business will soon go to ruin, with hired help managing it."

Amy said nothing. Mrs. Wridgely regarded her preoccupied face with a slight frown, then closed the subject by remarking briskly:

"Well, fortunately, Henry Scott is nothing to us. I ran over to see what you're going to wear to the reception, Amy."

"The same as usual, I suppose, if I go."

"If you go!" Mrs. Wridgely almost shrieked. "When you know the affair is complimentary to you! Of course you'll go! And you must wear your cream silk. I'll send Ruth to dress you. And, Amy, I want to take the waist and have the sleeves shortened. You have such pretty arms. I'll run up and get it."

"Judge! Hale and wife will be there," she resumed, returning to the porch with the waist.

"Be where?" Amy questioned vaguely.

"Well, if you aren't enough to— Be at the reception, of course, and Senator Ellsworth, too; he got back this morning. Mrs. Reed was so afraid they would not be here. I think I'll dress early and come over myself. Amy, or like as not you'll appear in that everlasting black! Of course you are full of your new book, but you ought something to your friends. Do put it out of your mind for this evening. I'll be over early."

"I'm glad it's out about Henry Scott," Mrs. Wridgely commended with herself. "I've been some afraid of the effect on her, but I guess she's forgotten that old affair, and I mentioned the senator on purpose to turn her thoughts. I wish I dare speak plainly to her about Senator Ellsworth. If she were only a little more like other folks! But then, I suppose, he would not find her so attractive."

Mrs. Wridgely had constituted herself first aid to Senator Ellsworth a few months before, when chance enabled her to extract a letter from Amy's mail which was plainly from Henry Scott. She felt justified. Amy would be spared mental disturbance, and, anyway, the letter was probably only a congratulatory note on the success of her book, such as she received constantly. Mrs. Wridgely's hopes concerning the senator were new then, and the brilliancy of the possible position for her sister Amy excited nothing.

Amy had been provokingly unappreciative of this advantageous opportunity, as she had been of many others, which was perhaps to be expected of people who wrote books.

Any sat alone pondering over her lover's peculiar silence. Was it due to jealousy of her success? She had gloried in his magnificent conduct when the papers had told of his plunging again and again into the burning wreck, rescuing women and children, and to her love, that folly and estrangement could not kill, was added hero worship. She had sat silent under the news of his calamity with a control that reassured her sister, but now her fan fell from her grasp, a broken heap.

"Blind! Blind!" she moaned.

The dark eyes that had looked into her heart with a power that no other could ever attain darkened forever.

Her imagination vividly pictured what it would mean to him, so active, so alive to the world and its needs, suddenly imprisoned in darkness, hopeless darkness, dependent upon others, limited to the companionship of hired attendants and his decrepit aunt, his sole relative.

At least she might write him a few sympathetic lines, the fact that she had but now learned of his terrible loss being explanation and justification of her former seemingly heartless indifference. In the privacy of her chamber she gave rein to her emotions, producing that which she hastily reduced to scraps for the wastebasket.

Recalling that other eyes now scanned his letters, she wrote and discarded page after page, finding each short epistle more difficult of composition. In the midst of her perplexity, and brought in the remodeled garment and an impetuous scrawl from Mrs. Wridgely to the effect that the article be tried on immediately and, if not satisfactory, returned for further alteration.

Amy dismissed the maid and donned the garment, her mind turning sentences over and over, still striving to express only the proper amount of interest. Then, as she absently arranged ribbons and lace, there came the firm conviction that to write was impossible; that she must see him as soon as distance would allow.

It would not have happened had Amy been properly chaperoned and accompanied instead of maintaining the independence which Mrs. Wridgely often and uselessly deplored. The generously salaried and loyal servants only looked their astonishment when, wearing the elbow sleeved bodice of her elegant reception gown, a black lace fichu and plain traveling bag, Miss Amy announced that she was going on a journey. As she descended the steps she received a large box from a florist's boy, and this she abstractedly carried with her.

She was still carrying it when, after an hours ride on a train, she walked to the old Scott homestead, at the end of the village, where she had been raised. She had been engrossed in the past, but once inside the gate she was roused to a somewhat embarrassing present. With a painfully beating heart she stole away to the summer house, hoping there to regain self control before ringing the bell. As she entered a voice, speaking from the gloom, startled her.

"Are you back so soon, auntie?"

"She would have run away, but a sudden weakness at sight of him, a heavy shade over his bandaged eyes, made her stand still on the bench beside him. He put out a groping hand as if sensing something unusual.

"Is it you, auntie? Is anything wrong—or who is it?"

The shock of his helplessness swept away everything but tender pity, yearning love and longing to minister to him. She caught the groping hand and kissed it, sobbing with impetuous abandon:

"Oh, Harry, Harry! I came as soon as I knew. I am going to stay with you and take care of you forever. You shall never, never be alone in the darkness again!"

"Why?" he cried. "Why, it must be—it is—Amy! My own Amy!"

His next movements demonstrated that his arms at least were as strong as of old, and Miss Colver submitted to the loving bonds without a struggle.

"Dear," he said gravely when the old misunderstanding and the purport of the purloined letter had been made clear—"Dear," he did not mean to let you leave me again, because you might forget to come back, but I must not hold you by false pretense. You came, like a sweet angel, to care for a blind man, but you will not discard me, will you, though my sight be fully restored, as I now have hopes it may be?"

"Oh, Harry!"

The ecstatic cry and the soft, bare arms about his neck were answer enough.

From the crushed box between them there crept a perfume that presently brought unpleasant remembrances to Miss Amy.

"Why," she exclaimed, examining the contents and the accompanying card, "the senator's roses! And I have on my—"

She viewed the costume with amazement, a guilty sense of outraged social amenities and her sister's disapproval.

When she had made shamefaced explanation, Henry Scott intimated, with a heartless disregard of the senator's shattered hopes, that the paragon was close by and that the evening bodice and the roses were plainly in preparation for the wedding that was to occur immediately.

Meaning In Oriental Rugs. Not only the design but the colors of the rugs woven in the orient are full of significance. They represent nationalities, the traditions and stand for virtue, vices and social importance. Red was regarded by the Egyptians as symbolic of fidelity. Rose tints signify the highest wisdom and black and indigo sorrow with the Persians. Preferences for duller tones of color among the Persians give to all their embroideries and other products of the loom a certain richness and dignity. Trian purple is almost universally regarded as royal. Green has been chosen by the Turk as his gait color, but he would not approve of its use in rugs, where it would be trodden by the feet.

The "Rote of the Waves." It is a favorite theory with the fishing and seafaring people on the north-east of Scotland that in a storm three waves are strong and violent, while the fourth is comparatively weak and less dangerous. This succession they call a "rote of waves." Fishermen returning from their fishing ground often prove by experience the truth of their theory and go back as they come near the shore to take advantage of the lull that follows, say, pretty regularly after three big breakers.

Happiness In Marriage. It all comes around to one of two things. With all married couples who differ in habit, in taste, in opinion, in mode of life, if there is to be any happiness somebody has to learn to give up or give up minding that there is a difference. Either way is as good as success. It is surprising how many things are not of any importance if one can only think they are not.—Harper's Bazar.
